

Farm Life Interpreter (Summer Position) 2020

Cole Harbour Heritage Farm Museum, Cole Harbour, Nova Scotia

The Museum

The Cole Harbour Heritage Farm Museum is an original Cole Harbour farm, cultivated continuously for over 200 years. It has operated as a community museum since 1978 and is owned and operated by the Cole Harbour Rural Heritage Society (CHRHS). The museum site is a rural oasis tucked into the middle of a now bustling urban centre. The main museum site consists of 12 buildings. Of those, two are historic houses, six are historic barns and outbuildings, and the remainder are museum support structures. This "open air" museum also includes gardens, pastureland, pathways and a small wetland and natural reserve. In addition to the heritage buildings, the museum collection consists of approximately 3000 artifacts representing the evolution of agriculture in the area, along with the implements and personal items of the peoples who made Cole Harbour home. A small representation of traditional farm animals is kept on site along with heritage gardens and native species of trees and shrubs, creating our living collection. The site contains a busy tearoom and gift shop within the original farmhouse, a working blacksmith shop and is a cultural and social hub for the community of Cole Harbour. The Museum operates on a free will donation basis, welcoming over 20,000 visitors per year.

The Position

As a Farm Museum, the two most visited exhibit areas are the animal barn and the garden. With a notable increase in the public's desire to reconnect with their food, the demand for interpretation and knowledge of these areas is also on the rise. The Farm Life Interpreter will help develop knowledge of the Museum's livestock and garden, and Cole Harbour's place in agricultural history.

Reporting to the Museum Director, duties of the Farm Life Interpreter shall include:

- Tending to the daily feeding and care of farm animals under the direction of senior staff and/or senior volunteers;
- Developing knowledge and resources of rural history in Cole Harbour and the Museum's collection of agricultural artifacts and implements;
- Performing barn chores using prescribed working artifacts and methods;
- Maintaining all areas of the livestock barn and keeping exhibits, visitor, and staff areas clean and orderly;
- Assisting with daily gardening chores under the direction of senior staff and/or senior volunteers;
- Developing knowledge and resources of cultivation history, plantings, composting, weeding, garden pests, and prevention methods;
- Performing garden chores using prescribed working artifacts and methods;
- Maintaining an active presence in livestock or garden exhibits areas and engaging visitors, gauging their interests, and responding to enquiries;
- Conducting garden and livestock tours for children groups, senior groups, and community groups
