

Horticulturalist (Summer Position) 2022

Cole Harbour Heritage Farm Museum, Cole Harbour, Nova Scotia

The Museum

The Cole Harbour Heritage Farm Museum is an original Cole Harbour farm, cultivated continuously for over 200 years. It has operated as a community museum since 1978 and is owned and operated by the Cole Harbour Rural Heritage Society (CHRHS). The museum site is a rural oasis tucked into the middle of a now bustling urban centre, and consists of 12 buildings. Of those, two are historic houses, six are historic barns and outbuildings and the remainder are museum support structures. This "open air" museum also includes gardens, pastureland, pathways and a small wetland and natural reserve. In addition to the heritage buildings, the museum collection consists of approximately 4000 artifacts representing the evolution of agriculture in the area, along with the implements and personal items of the peoples who made Cole Harbour home. A small representation of traditional farm animals is kept on site along with heritage gardens and native species of trees and shrubs, creating our living collection. The site contains a busy tearoom and gift shop within the original farmhouse, as well as a working blacksmith shop, and is a cultural and social hub for the community of Cole Harbour. The Museum operates on a free will donation basis, welcoming over 20,000 visitors per year.

The Position

The gardens of the Cole Harbour Heritage Farm Museum are a core attraction for visitors from near and far. They are a focal point of the Museum's interpretation, connecting visitors directly to the farming heritage of the area, and encouraging the sharing of stories of Cole Harbour's past. The role of the horticulturalist is to care for the vegetable and perennial gardens at the farm, as well as greet visitors and answer any questions they may have. They will collaborate with volunteers and other staff members to ensure the gardens respond to the needs of the farm, and they will give tours to school groups and day camps. Through this role, the horticulturalist will be integral to the success of the farm's summer season.

Reporting to the Executive Director, the duties of the horticulturalist include:

- Develop an appreciation for the role the garden plays in the everyday operation of the museum, from its interpretation of the community's agricultural past to its value in promoting healthier lifestyles and use of local produce;
- Collaborate with interpretive and tearoom staff to make the garden responsive to their needs, i.e., making staff aware of areas specially suited to introducing children to nature and assisting in the development of plant-related and food-related program ideas;
- Develop a sensory garden incorporating the Farm Museum's raised permaculture bed for usage by children and/or seniors;
- Record and coordinate the activities of garden volunteers and oversee the master plan for the gardening year;
